Adherence to guidelines for the management of epilepsy in children and adolescents: a 7-year hospital-based study. The objective of the study was to assess adherence to the French national guidelines for the diagnosis and management of epilepsy (GDMEP) in paediatric patients. The paediatric population under investigation consisted of patients (1) evaluated between 2001 and 2007 and treated at the department of paediatrics (Paris metropolitan area) and (2) newly referred to a paediatric neurologist after referral to the department of paediatrics during the same period. In the study period, 333 patients were included. The most frequent type of epilepsy was idiopathic epilepsy. Six percent of the patients were unaware of their condition. Five percent of the patients were non-adherent to at least one guideline and the most common guideline not applied was the use of the percentage of time seizure-free to determine treatment efficacy. This was mainly due to the lack of comparative trials. Few paediatric patients followed the French GDMEP. Better adherence to guidelines might improve the quality of care for patients.
